GENERAL WEYGAND ARRESTED

GENERAL WEYGAND, Allied Commander-in-Chief in the West at the time of the fall of France and later chief Vichy Representative in French North Africa, was arrested when he arrived in Paris by plane on Wednesday night from Germany, says a Paris Reuter report.

He is accused of having played a decisive rôle in the Council of Ministers on June 12th, 1940, at the Chateau de Cande, when he affirmed: "The war is definitely lost," and that "a cessation of hostilities is imperative."

The Council of Ministers refused to follow his lead, and it was only at Bordeaux that, in agreement with Marshal Pétain and Pierre Laval, he obtained a decision to ask for an armistice.

Jean Borrotra, the French lawn tennis star and former Vichy Sports Minister, was detained at the same time as General Weygand, and is being kept under house arrest.

Both were arrested on the orders of the Special High Court, which is to try Marshal Pétain.

German Legation Handed Over

THE keys of the former German Legation in Dublin have been handed over to the American Minister in Eire. The Government Information Bureau yesterday announced:—

"The Minister for External Affairs having been informed by the American Minister, on the instructions of his Government, that the Governments of the United Nations had assumed the powers and property of the Government of Germany, and that he was prepared on their behalf to take over the premises of the former German Legation, the keys were duly handed over to-day."

General MacEoin Claims Support Of All Parties

In support of his candidature for the Presidency of Ireland, General Sean MacEoin, T.D., addressed a large fair day meeting in Carrickmacross yesterday. Stating that he had been nominated by every section of the community, General MacEoin said he was going forward in the same simple way as he did 30 years ago, when he led a small portion of their youth in the struggle for freedom. He discharged his obligations to the best of his ability, and was fair to friends and opponents alike. He took up arms in defence of Irish rights and liberties, and before a Field General Court-martial, which sentenced him to death, he had continued to assert those rights.

In this election he could not refer to anything of a political nature, and, therefore, must rely on the people to use their judgment. They could by their votes make sure of a people's President, and he would, if elected, continue to further and maintain the rights of the people within the Constitution. In the Presidential election there was no political issue, and his candidature was due to the support of representatives of all parties.

The unity that had existed during the emergency should be maintained, said Alderman J. Aylward when at a meeting of Waterford Corporation he called upon the Government to find an agreed candidate for the Presidency.

Killed By Train

Mrs. Kathleen Samuels, a young married woman, of Castlemaine street, Athlone, was killed by a train while crossing the railway line on the way to a bog. She was in a cart at the time, and on seeing the train coming she jumped out.

The Allied Military Government declared yesterday that all German schools would remain closed until a Commission of American, English and Russian professors had written new text-books, according to Radio Luxembourg.—(Reuter.)

German Ships Surrender At Copenhagen

CHANNEL ISLANDS AND DUNKIRK FREED

THE SURRENDER OF THE CHANNEL ISLANDS, DUNKIRK, CRETE, AND MILOS TO THE ALLIES WAS ANNOUNCED YESTERDAY. AT COPENHAGEN, THE LAST REMNANTS OF THE GERMAN FLEET SURRENDERED TO A FORCE OF BRITISH VESSELS. OVER FIFTY GERMAN CRAFT SUBMITTED, HEADED BY THE POWERFUL CRUISERS, PRINZ EUGEN AND NURNBERG.

The Channel Islands were finally liberated at 7.14 a.m. on Wednesday when Major-General Heine, of the German Army, signed the instrument of surrender to the Allied Powers. Thus, more than seven hours after the war had officially ended, the only part of the United Kingdom which had been in German occupation was freed from a bondage which had lasted since June 30th, 1940.

To receive the surrender of the German vessels at Copenhagen a British naval force steamed through minefields in the Skagerrak and Kattegat and penetrated into the Baltic for the first time for five years.

The German vessels were headed by the cruisers Prinz Eugen and Nürnberg, which a few days ago had been shelling the Danish capital. With them in the harbour were two large destroyers, one small destroyer, two torpedo-boats, ten minesweepers, 13 flak ships, 19 armed trawlers and two armed merchant ships, one of them belong to the Altmark class

The British warships were under the command of Captain Herbert Williams, R.N., in the cruiser Birmingham; the cruiser Dido and the destroyers Zephyr, Zealous, Zodiac and Zest completed the squadron.

As a Danish port pilot took the ships down the winding Channel, not a German flag was to be seen. All the ships' masts were bare and the German crews were leaning over the guard rails watching.

At a meeting at the H.Q. of Col.-General Lindemann, who was German C.-in-C. in Denmark, to work out certain details of the capitulation terms, Lindemann stated that the departure of the German troops had been worked out so that they would, generally speaking, have left Denmark within four weeks. The Germans undertook to remove their land-mines themselves, adds Danish radio.

Fifteen hundred Russian troops, under the command of Colonel Krepow, have landed on the Danish island of Bornholm, says an A.P. message from Copenhagen. There are still some 20,000 German soldiers in Bornholm. It was stated that the Russians have come to disarm the Germans.

Two German submarines surfaced and entered Weymouth Bay yesterday to surrender. The first was the U249, and she had on board five officers and 43 ratings. She is believed to have been at sea 40 days, and her young commander is Ober-Lieut. Kock.

The U-boats flew the black flags of surrender and the British Ensign over the German flag. Other submarines are expected to put into Weymouth Bay to-day.

Two more German submarines surrendered yesterday to the Royal Navy at a remote inlet on the north coast of Scotland, near Cape Wrath.

The German garrison at Dunkirk, which had been holding out since the Allied forces swept across France, has surendered.

Norwegians Welcome Allied Troops

Allied troops, comprising about 2,000 Norwegians, English and Americans, arrived on Sola airfield at Stavanger yesterday, says the Norwegian Telegraph Service. They were greeted enthusiastically by the inhabitants.

Norwegian police troops entered Narvik yesterday to begin the final liberation of North Norway, according to Norwegian radio.

In the Mediterranean theatre the German garrisons on the islands of Crete and Milos have surrendered. British and Greek officers signed the surrender terms for Crete on behalf of the Allies at 10.30 on Wednesday night. The German garrison on Crete was recently estimated to number 10,000 Germans and 4,000 Italians.

The British military authorities have accepted the surrender at Gorizia of 15,000 Yugo-Slav Chetniks (General Mihailovitch's forces), but General Mihailovitch was not among them, says a despatch from Reuter's correspondent in Trieste.

BRITISH PETROL RATION TO BE RESTORED

THE basic ration of petrol in Britain is to be restored within the next 30 days.

This announcement was made yesterday by Mr. Geoffrey Lloyd, M.P., Chairman of the Oil Control Board and Petroleum Secretary, and by Mr. Churchill in the House of Commons.

The scales of allowances are:—

Cars up to 9 h.p. will get four gallons a month; cars of 10 to 13 h.p., five gallons; 14 to 19 h.p., six gallons, and 20 h.p. and over seven gallons.

Motor cycles will receive two or three gallons a month, according to the cylinder capacity, and the scale of allowances for cars and motor cycles used for professional and business purposes will be increased.

Allowances for taxi cabs and private hire cars will be increased by about 30 per cent., and the distances over which they may operate will be doubled.

The date on which the ration will come into operation will be announced shortly.

The Press Association states that the basic ration which was stopped at the close of June, 1942, was higher for the last three months before it ceased than the allowances now announced.

Mr. Churchill, in the House of Commons, announcing the new ration, said: "The petrol supply position remains difficult, owing to the huge requirements of the Pacific war and the prospect that military needs in Europe will continue at a high level for some months to come."

An Automobile Association official said: "We look upon these new allowances as only the prelude to the earliest cancellation of all restriction on the supply of petrol," and a Royal Automobile Club official stated: "These amounts will only provide petrol for the shortest possible journeys round and about people's homes. This ration is not even a gesture; it is merely an insult."

Position In Eire

"The announcement from England raises hopes in the hearts of all Irish motorists," Senator F. M. Summerfield, the well-known motor trader, told an Irish Times reporter last night. "I sincerely hope," he said, "that our own Government will be able to make a similar announcement before long. Naturally the motor trade hopes that after the very long period of depression the Government will find it possible to expedite the restoration of the basic ration here in order that private motorists may once more run their cars.

"While many industries have benefited during the Emergency, it must be conceded that the motor trade was hit probably harder than any other activity in the State, and certainly the trade will welcome the opportunity for an early resumption of business."

Motor Trade Outlook

Speaking at a luncheon of the Motor Agents' Association, Ltd. (Ulster Division) in Belfast yesterday, Sir Basil Brooke said that those people who imagined that they were going back to the situation that existed in 1939 were living in a fool's paradise. Sir Basil said that the Government would assist industry and prevent any serious unemployment.

Sir Roland Nugent, Minister of Commerce, said he was sorry to say that controls must stay on for a year or two, but he asked the industry, if it had a good case for the early lifting of control, not to be backward in telling the Ministry.

Mr. George W. Lucas, London, the National President, said it was useless for the Government to exhort industry to go for expansion and then follow their own restrictionist policy. The British Government shackled them with a taxation system which would inevitably drive the British vehicle out of world markets as the horse-power tax had done for 25 years before the war.

Mr. Lucas, in an interview, said the industry was going to have a superhuman job to produce a 10 h.p. car at less than £300, compared with £185 pre-war. A 12 h.p. family car at £100 was, however, a practical possibility within five or six years provided the taxation gave the manufacturer "his head."

Killed at Sea On VE-Day

Two lives were lost when the Belfast-bound steamship, Avondale Park, was torpedoed and sunk off the north-east coast of Britain on VE-Day. A Norwegian ship was also sunk.

John Saunders (57), cook, one of the 31 survivors from the Avondale Park, said that he was asleep when the attack was made at 11 p.m. A torpedo struck the engine room, killing Chief Engineer Anderson, of Newcastle, and W. Harvey, donkeyman greaser. As the ship shuddered and the lights went out, the crew ran for the boats. Five minutes after they had left her, the Avondale Park sank.

The 8,000-ton American Liberty ship, Horace Binney, struck a German mine 36 miles from Flushing on the same day. The captain and 14 of the crew were injured.

Sleep-walking Submission in Murder Charge

ALLEGED to have set fire to her baby's cot in the Rotunda Hospital, Dublin, Mrs. Elizabeth Rogers, Oldtown, Co. Dublin, was charged at the Central Criminal Court, Dublin, yesterday, before Mr. Justice Davitt and a jury with the murder of her infant daughter, Mary, on January 25th, 1945.

Mr. E. M. Wood (instructed by Mr. Liam Cafferkey), who defended, said he would submit evidence that the accused woman was a sleep-walker and that she had worry and troubles which produced the state of mind which resulted in the child's death and that she was at the time not responsible for it.

Mr. R. McLaughlin, S.C. (who with Mr. Felix Sherry prosecuted), said the prisoner was married on November 30th, 1944. She was admitted to the Rotunda Hospital on January 20th, 1945, and the baby was born next day. On the 25th, the State alleged, she set fire to the baby's cot and the infant died from the burns.

Counsel suggested as a motive that the attendant shame following the birth of a child conceived out of wedlock might prompt a mother to destroy the child.

Nurse M. Moran, in evidence, said that once, when she found Mrs. Rogers out of bed, she said that she walked in her sleep when in a strange place for the first time.

Mrs. Kearns, a patient in the ward, said that at about 3 a.m. she saw Mrs. Rogers kneeling on her own bed, with a lighted taper, which she was holding in the direction of the child's cot. She saw flames, and screamed for help.

The evidence of members of the nursing staff was to the effect that on the day following the night on which the child was burned Mrs. Rogers, who seemed to be dull and apathetic, said that she did not know what had happened, as she was the last to wake up; that she expressed the opinion that it "must have been a spark from the fire," and that she had not been out of bed.

MASTER'S EVIDENCE

Dr. Ninian Falkiner, Master of the Rotunda, said he saw Mrs. Rogers in bed at 3.46 a.m. on the 25th January. She was dazed, and said she had been wakened by the screams, and that that was all she knew about it. The body was badly burned. When he told her that the baby was dead she did not seem to react.

Replying to Mr. Wood, Dr. Falkiner said that it was recognised that insanity might occur during pregnancy, and sometimes more acutely during the labour period. He agreed that there was a form of insanity known as puerperal mania, which might be attributable to the family history of the patient, or might be caused by anxiety or stress. He agreed that illegitimate pregnancy might be a cause of such anxiety, but usually there was something in the personal make-up as a contributory cause.

Giving evidence for the defence, Mrs. Rogers said that she had a child in 1938, which was placed with foster parents. The courtship of her present husband was broken off when he heard about the child. Subsequently it was resumed, and in August, 1944, she became pregnant. They were married in the following November. At the Rotunda Hospital she complained of sleeplessness, and was given tablets, after which she slept well. She denied that she had set fire to any cot that night.

Mr. McLaughton—We are to take it that on two occasions only you walked in your sleep?—Yes.

The Court adjourned until 10.30 a.m. to-day.

Fighting Flares Up in Czechoslovakia

THE war is still not quite over. Soviet forces on the Czechoslovak front are massing against the Germans in the central part of the country, says a dispatch from Reuter's special correspondent in Moscow.

There are still German forces between the Russian lines and the Czech capital. They are making determined efforts to infiltrate through the American lines to surrender to the Western Powers, according to an American correspondent broadcasting from General Bradley's command post.

Thirty thousand prisoners were counted by the 4th Army Group on Wednesday and well over 100,000 are reported to be still coming through the American lines. There are also large numbers of German civilians who fear not so much the Russians as the Czech people.

Last night's Soviet communiqué said that the Schoerner group in Czechoslovakia had refused to comply with the terms of the armistice and the Russians had therefore gone over to the attack.

The communiqué added:—"Another group of Field-Marshal Schoerner's forces also infringed the capitulation terms and began to withdraw west.

"Troops of the 4th Ukrainian front, pursuing them, occupied on Czechoslovak territory the towns of Richnov and Skotelec and other localities. Over 20,000 prisoners were taken.

"German troops, commanded by Colonel-General Weller, faced by troops of the 2nd Ukrainian front, also infringed the terms of capitulation, refusing to stand where they were and lay down their arms. In view of this, troops of this front attacked Weller's troops and captured towns on Czechoslovak territory.

"Troops of the 3rd Ukrainian front on Austrian territory occupied a number of towns and linked up with Allied troops west of Graz. Over 23,000 prisoners were taken, including four Generals."—(Reuter.)

On the Leningrad front yesterday the Russians continued to accept the surrender of formations and units of the Kurland grouping of German troops. By 8 a.m. 68,778 German soldiers and N.C.O.'s, 1,982 officers and 13 generals had been taken prisoner.

12 To 15 Million Russians Died

ACCORDING to a Russian general's estimate, given to an Allied correspondent in Berlin, the war has cost Russia between 12,000,000 and 15,000,000 dead—of whom half were soldiers and half civilians.

"There were times," he said, "when we had to lose 500,000 men at a time to save the army itself."—(Reuter.)

T.U.C. Secretary Resigns

THE National Executive of the Irish Trade Union Congress yesterday received, and accepted, the resignation of Mr. Cathal O'Shannon from the position of Secretary.

Representatives of the unions affiliated to the Congress will meet to-day to review the position brought about by the disaffiliation of certain Irish unions, writes our Labour correspondent. The President (Mr. Gilbert Lynch), General Organiser, Amalgamated Transport and General Workers' Union, will outline the recent developments. Meanwhile, the vacancies on the National Executive are being filled, and Messrs. Frank Foley (Irish Municipal Employees' Trade Union); John Swift (Bakers' Union); Miss Louie Bennett (Irish Women Workers' Union) have agreed to act. The two other vacancies are likely to be filled by representatives of the Irish National Teachers' Organisation and the Postal Workers' Union, respectively.

Aluminium Houses For Britain

AN order for 50,000 temporary aluminium houses for Britain has been placed by Mr. Duncan Sandys, British Minister of Works. Before the order is completed, the Minister hopes it may be possible to turn the end of it into an order for permanent aluminium houses.

The houses will not come off the production line until September.

Died from Gunshot Wound

Cornelius Meagher (34), of Classon's Bridge, Milltown, Dublin, who was seriously wounded in the head on Monday night when his .22 rifle discharged accidentally as he was cleaning it, died in the Royal City of Dublin Hospital, Baggot street, this morning without regaining consciousness.

Mr. Eden's Tribute To Arrested Polish Leaders

The British Foreign Minister, Mr. Anthony Eden, said at a Press conference yesterday that the list of the 16 Poles reported as having disappeared included nearly all the leading figures of the Polish underground movement.

"These men," Mr. Eden said, "maintained an excellent record of resistance to the Germans throughout the war. Most of them were just the type who, in our view, should be consulted about the new national Government in Poland, if such a Government is to be truly representative of Polish democratic political life in accordance with the Crimea decision.

Mr. Eden stated the conversations were taking place outside the Conference itself. The most unhappy "news" of the arrest of the Poles has made further progress with these conversations impossible.

"Inevitably the arrest of these men," Mr. Eden added, "has put a stop to our work here, so far as the Polish problem is concerned. It will now be for the British, U.S. and Soviet Governments to take stock of the situation.

"War Criminals"

The U.S. State Department announces that Judge Rosenman has been in San Francisco for several days as President Truman's personal representative to present to the representatives of the United Kingdom, Russia and France, America's proposals for the prosecution and trial of European "war criminals."

Judge Rosenman, the statement said, is acting in conjunction with Mr. Stettinius. He has been in consultation with Mr. Justice Robert Jackson, who will be the United States chief of counsel in prosecuting the major "war criminals" and with other interested Government Departments.

Konrad Henlein, Gauleiter of Sudetenland (shown above), and Karl Frank, German Military Governor of Czechoslovakia, have been captured, says a Reuter message from Prague.

MEDICAL VIEW IN G.N. TRAIN MEALS ACTION

THE hearing of evidence was continued before the President of the High Court and a jury yesterday in the two actions against the Great Northern Railway Company for damages for alleged breach of warranty in the sale of a meal in the restaurant-car of a Dundalk to Dublin train on June 29th last, and had not concluded when the Court adjourned until to-day. Mrs. Martha Farrell, 19 Ash street, and Miss Teresa Walsh, Carmen's Hall, Dublin, who have taken the actions, stated that they contracted typhoid fever from the food.

The company deny their allegations.

Dr. C. McSweeney, who is in charge of Cork Street Fever Hospital, Dublin, stated, in cross-examination by Mr. Costello, that, in his opinion, the outbreak of typhoid fever in 1944, of which he had given evidence the previous day, had been caused by a carrier. He agreed that it was difficult to ascertain whether a person were a carrier of typhoid germs or not.

Mr. J. A. Costello, S.C.—Supposing you were told that in the year in which this outbreak took place, nearly a million meals were served in the Great Northern Railway Company's buffets and restaurant-cars, and that no outbreak, except this one, took place, would not that be material evidence that the handling of food and its protection were adequate, and that sufficient precautions were taken?—Yes; I think you could take it that it would: of course, you must remember that these outbreaks are rare.

When Dr. McSweeney had given the opinion that a carrier had been the cause of the outbreak, Mr. Costello suggested to him that that view bordered on the region of speculation. Dr. McSweeney did not agree, saying that to his mind that was the only rational explanation of it.

Mr. Costello—You would not agree that the carriage of this disease by flies cannot be excluded?—I say that in an outbreak of this magnitude it is extremely unlikely.

Thomas MacDonald, St. Mary's road, East Wall road, Dublin, who said that he had been kitchen boy in the restaurant-car from May till July of last year, stated that the milk, salmon, chicken, salad and bread for use in the car had been collected by him at Amiens street restaurant and taken to the dining-coach every morning. He had collected the beef at the company's refreshment rooms at Clones, and the ham had been got at Dundalk station. All the meat was cooked, and the carving was done by a woman on the train. Once or twice a week he brought some food home with him from the restaurant-car, and on one occasion his two sisters and father became ill and about a fortnight later he himself became ill, but continued to work, until at the end of five days he was taken off the train and sent to the district hospital at Dundalk.

Dr. F. Elcock, medical superintendent, Clonskea Fever Hospital, said that Mrs. Farrell and Miss Walsh had been admitted to the hospital on July 14th last, suffering from typhoid fever, and that their condition was consistent with their having been infected on June 29th. In July and August last other people had been admitted, suffering from typhoid fever, and their condition was consistent with their having been infected on June 29th and dates in the following week.

Anglo-Eire Trade Agreement Hopes

By AN INDUSTRIAL CORRESPONDENT

Now that the European war is over Irish manufacturers and producers are discussing the prospects of a new Anglo-Eire trade agreement. The matter has, it is understood, also been discussed by representatives of United Kingdom manufacturers who recently visited this country. During the war, cross-Channel manufacturers, when approached in regard to supplies for Eire, gave an assurance of their readiness to resume normal trading relations as soon as peace was restored. It must be expected, therefore, that big efforts in this direction will at once be set in motion.

The Trade Agreement of 1938 had little opportunity to prove its worth, because of the outbreak of the European war Furthermore, it had only a three years' lease of life, and, therefore, expired on May 18th, 1941. Trade since then between the two countries has been of a desultory nature, and steps are, it is thought, about to be taken to put it on a sounder and more mutually advantageous basis.

It will be recalled that the 1938 Agreement was designed to give British manufacturers a chance of competing fairly in the Irish markets, and that this was to be effected by the lowering of tariffs found by the Prices Commission to be too high. Had the Agreement not expired in 1941, its effects on the prices of home-manufactured articles might have been beneficial to the entire community.

Any new agreement with Great Britain now would, it is believed, have to be approached from different angles and based on different considerations from those obtaining in 1938, because of the new industrial experiences given birth to in this country by the necessities of the war period. Certain industries have had a precarious existence during the past six years, while others have made important strides in development. Many new industries—some of a highly technical nature—were about to be established in 1939, but had to be postponed.

The war has established an Irish mercantile marine, which has been of tremendous help to the nation, and the question is now being asked: "How will it fare under a new trade agreement?"

It may be argued by Irish industrialists that the present is not an opportune time for an agreement, because of the large stocks of raw materials and manufactured goods in the country purchased from the United States and South America at high prices, and that until these stocks are disposed of an agreement which would tend at once to lower prices would be disastrous. This argument is unlikely to sway the Government to any great extent, because retailers, manufacturers and producers reaped the benefit of the rising prices in the early years of the war.

With the war now ended the question is being asked: When will the excess corporation profits tax and the restrictions imposed on directorships and on payments of dividends disappear?

Demobilisation to Cost £4,000,000

THE estimated cost of demobilisation of the Army will not be less than £4,000,000, a White Paper by the Minister for Defence, Mr. Oscar Traynor, showed last night.

Of this amount, approximately £2,500,000 will be in respect of gratuities, £800,000 in respect of deferred pay, and a nett amount of £270,000 in respect of the provision of unemployment benefit. The balance represents the estimated cost of re-enlistment bounties, pre-demobilisation leave, civilian clothing, and travelling warrants.

The scheme contains proposals for the acceptance of suitable temporary and reserve officers and N.C.O.s and men of the Emergency and Reserve classes for service in the post-emergency permanent force. In this connection the Government have approved of a provisional establishment for the post-emergency permanent force, which will necessitate the recruitment for that force of not less than an additional 600 officers and 6,000 other ranks. Officers with temporary commissioned rank will be eligible.

Suitable N.C.O.s or men may be permitted to re-enlist for a period of twelve years, this term to include Emergency Service. Everyone in this class who re-enlists will be required to serve at least two years in Army Service from the date of re-enlistment. If suitable, he may also, in due course, re-engage to complete a total of twenty-one years' Army Service. In addition to the gratuities being provided for those who may retire, N.C.O.s and men who re-enlist will be paid the following bounties:—Private, £10; Corporal, £12; Sergeant, £14; Company Quartermaster Sergeant and Company Sergeant, £16; and Battalion Quartermaster Sergeant and Sergeant Major, £18.

Under the heading of "Employment," the White Paper says that if 7,000 members of the temporary, emergency and Reserve classes are absorbed into the permanent force there will remain approximately a further 20,000 who will have to be demobilised and the resettlement of whom will constitute the main problem of demobilisation. Many of these would be able to return to Government and other service where re-employment had been guaranteed and others would be in a position to resume the professions or private business. Former employers who fail to comply with the provisions of the Defence Forces (Temporary Provisions) Acts, which provide for the reinstatement, as far as practicable, of those who joined up for the emergency, are liable, it is pointed out, on conviction to heavy penalties.

Certain Civil Service appointments will be reserved for members who had not taken up employment or were not permanently employed when they enlisted, and certain concessions will be granted to applicants for posts under local authorities.

For those who fail to secure immediate employment the Government proposes that full-time Army service will be treated on the same basis as insurable employment under the Unemployment Insurance Acts.

Two rates of gratuities are being provided for officers and men who are demobilised. One rate will provide roughly three days' pay and allowances for each period of thirty days' service during the emergency, up to a maximum of seventy-two such periods. The lower rate provides two days' pay and allowances for each such period. Those who have less than one year's service, officers of the permanent force, those with short service commissions in the Air Corps and certain other classes, will not be entitled to gratuities.

It is intended that the rate of demobilisation will not exceed an average of 2,000 a month.

Some Examples

EXAMPLES of the gratuities payable to unmarried officers show that a 2nd Lieutenant will receive £26 13s. for one year's reckonable service and £159 18s. for six years' service. Corresponding figures for a Lieutenant are £30 5s. and £181 10s.; Captain £37 9s. and £224 14s.; Commandant, £48 5s. and £289 10s.; Major, £55 9s. and £332 14s.; Colonel, £62 13s. and £375 18s. Married officers will receive slightly higher rates.

In the case of unmarried N.C.O.s and men the corresponding figures are: Class 1 Private, £10 7s. and £62 2s.; Corporal, £12 3s. and £72 18s.; Sergeant, £13 19s. and £83 14s.; C.Q.M.S., £14 17s. and £89 2s.; Company Sergeant, £15 15s. and £94 10s.; B.Q.M.S., £16 13s. and £99 18s.; Sergeant-Major, £18 9s. and £110 14s. Slightly higher rates are again provided for married men, with variations according to the number of children.

"Big Three" May Meet in London

LONDON may be the meeting place for the next "Big Three" Conference, according to dispatches from Britain quoted in New York. Hitherto, it had been ruled out because it was under constant German bombardment.

Mr. Eden is expected to leave San Francisco at the beginning of next week, and it is suggested that he may break his journey in Washington to make arrangements for an early meeting between President Truman, Mr. Churchill and Marshal Stalin.

V E-Day Clashes In Co. Monaghan

A large party, headed by an Orange band, was stopped by Civic Guards on Wednesday night from entering Newbliss, Co. Monaghan, to celebrate the war victory. As the Orangemen lighted a fire on a hill nearby, a rival crowd made efforts to put it out, but were prevented from doing so by the Civic Guards. The Tricolour was hoisted over the Catholic Hall, and the crowd sang the National Anthem.

Senator's Statement Contradicted

The Government Information Bureau stated last night:—

The attention of the Minister for Agriculture has been directed to a statement reported as having been made in the Senate by Senator J. J. Counihan to the effect that an export permit could not be obtained from the Department for the export of potatoes by the Irish Red Cross Society. This statement is not correct. The Secretary of the Society was informed at the beginning of the potato harvest last October that a permit would be issued as soon as required, and this has, in fact, been done.

Statue Beheaded

It was discovered yesterday morning that the statue of the 7th Lord Farnham, recently removed to a new site opposite the Protestant Hall, Cavan, had been beheaded during the night. The statue was erected to the memory of Lord Farnham, who, with his wife, was burned to death in a railway accident at Abergele, North Wales, in 1868.

Northern Internees.—A deputation of Nationalists has seen the Northern Premier, Sir Basil Brooke, and the Minister of Home Affairs, Mr. E. S. Warnock, and urged the immediate release of all internees. Sir Basil said that the views expressed would be considered.

There are those who, by virtue of their eminence, are not obliged to bow to changing fashion. Thus they choose the Humber, not because it is the choice of high society, but because the finest of its kind — whatever it may be — is their prerogative by right of age-long custom and tradition.

Odds-on Favourites Fail at Clonmel

AFTER a bad start backers recovered some of their losses at Powerstown Park, Clonmel, yesterday, but those who specialise in supporting odds-on favourites found it a costly proceeding. Followers of O'Grady's stable went solidly for Grandace in the Cashel Plate, but the best he could do was to finish third to Milford Bridge.

The next odds-on favourite to fail was Drybob, one of the dead-heaters for last year's Cambridgeshire. He was beaten into third place by Bell Walk and Caltha.

Those who went to recover losses by laying odds on Hamstar in the Clonmel Plate only got deeper into the mire as he was unplaced to Mr. Freezer. O'Grady saddled a third odds-on favourite in Home Wind for the Waterford Plate, but the gelding found one too good for him in Ashtown who had run well at the "Junction."

The Bruff trainer, Mr. Joe Hogan, wound up the day with a double event, saddling Jack Finlay to win the Powerstown Park Plate and Organ Grinder in the final event. Jack Finlay is owned by Mr. Hogan's daughter, whose first winner he was. His son, Joe, took the mount on Organ Grinder and scored with any amount in hand.

KEEN CRICKET IN PROSPECT

THE splendid effort of R. and S.P.U. in tieing with Pembroke, joint holders of the Senior Cricket League, on Wednesday evening, has given a definite fillip to the early stages of the competition, and it looks as if there will be keen competition for this year's championship. The big match to-morrow will be at Rathmines, where Leinster are at home to Pembroke. The teams seem to be evenly matched, and with both at full strength there is the likelihood of another close finish.

R. and S.P.U. face a severe task in Phoenix Park, for Phoenix are strongly equipped in all departments now that J. C. Boucher has regained his health. Despite their promising array of bowlers, the new seniors may find the Phoenix attack too strong for their somewhat doubtful batting resources.

On the form shown against Clontarf, Merrion seem likely to take full points from Dublin University, whose batsmen may take some time to settle down. Another team who are finding runs hard to get are Y.M.C.A., and unless a rapid improvement is seen they will hardly hold Clontarf at Claremont road.

BALTRAY GIRL WINS SCRATCH GOLF CUP

By J. P. ROONEY

MISS Philomena Garvey, nineteen years and one month old, who, like Mrs. V. Reddan, learned her golf from childhood on the Baltray, Co. Louth, links, yesterday, at the Castle, won the Leinster Ladies' Scratch Cup. She defeated Miss D. Henry, of the Foxrock Club by 4 and 3 in the final.

The Duggan Cup, for handicaps of 13 and over, was won by a promising all-round golfer from Donabate, Co. Dublin, Club, Mrs. F. G. Moran. She beat Miss McAuley (Dun Laoghaire) in the final by 2 and 1.

Having studied closely Miss Garvey's style and method of playing the wood and irons, I, like many others with ample experience of the game, am of the opinion that, except as regards her footwork, which needs attention, she is another "Clarrie Tiernan." In fact, I doubt if her senior clubmate, at her age, was a better golfer in length, accuracy and style.

Yesterday we had a few more demonstrations of her surprising power with the driver and her crispness and skill with the No. 4 and mashie. In the morning, when playing Mrs. P. Butler, she was near the 16th green (491 yards—ladies' tees, of course) with driver and brassey. Against Miss Henry she was hole high at the 9th (452 yards) with driver and No. 5.

The Foxrock lady, at the 9th, gave us an admirable demonstration of the neatly pulled drive. It was one of the best strokes of the three days, but, unfortunately, she cut her iron, and lost the hole to a very fine 4, and turned two down.

The short 10th was, perhaps, Miss Garvey's worst hole. From close to the green, she took 4 to hole out, missed a putt of little more than a foot and a half; but she made up for it with 4 at the 11th, where Miss Henry was in trouble for the tee and with her second.

Miss Henry, however, was not finished with even when 4 down at the 12th to another 4, but a typical chip by Miss Garvey to the holeside from off the 15th green for a 3 brought it to a close.

LEINSTER SCRATCH CUP

Semi-finals—Miss P. Garvey (Co. Louth) beat Mrs. P. Butler (Milltown), 4 and 2; Miss D. Henry (Foxrock) beat Miss C. Banim (Kilkenny), 4 and 3.

Final—Miss Garvey beat Miss Henry, 4 and 3.

DUGGAN CUP

STRONG SUPPORT FOR CHAMOSSAIRE

CHAMOSSAIRE'S prominent display in the 2,000 Guineas, in which he finished fourth, and was staying on well in the final stages of the race, had its full effect on the Derby betting when the card was called-over at the Victoria Club, London, yesterday. He was introduced into the market at 12 to 1, and was supported to win £45,000, leaving 100 to 9 the best offer.

Dante was backed to win £11,000 at 17 to 2. There was no support for Court Martial, nominal favourite at 8 to 1.

The Derby (run Newmarket, June 9th)—8/1 against Court Martial, 17/2 Dante, High Peak; 100/9 Chamossaire, 100/8 Paper Weight, Sun Storm; 100/6 Royal Charger, 18/1 Rising Light, 25/1 Fordham, Precipitic; 33/1 Blue Water, 35/1 Concentration.

The Oaks (run Newmarket, June 8th)—7/4 Sun Stream, 5/1 Sweet Cygnet, 8/1 Mrs. Feather.

T.D.'s Appeal Against Fines

PATRICK J. FOGARTY, T.D., Swords, appealed in the Circuit Civil Court, Dublin, yesterday, against convictions and fines totalling £102 imposed on him by the District Court in February, when he was convicted of having supplied false and misleading information to the authorities in order to obtain a permit to purchase a motor-lorry, of obtaining coupons for the purchase of petrol, and for aiding and abetting Peter Rooney, of Ballyboghill, to the same end.

Opening the case for the State, Mr. A. O'Keeffe (instructed by the Chief State Solicitor) said that Peter Rooney, of Ballyboghill, owned a motor lorry in 1943, and was engaged in haulage. He wanted to purchase a second lorry for the purpose of getting more petrol and extending his business. For some reason he came to the conclusion that, if the second lorry were purchased in his own name, he would not get extra petrol, and he, therefore, decided that the lorry should be purchased for him by a man named Robert Savage. Rooney negotiated for the purchase of the lorry from Joseph Harford, Swords, the permit application being made in the name of Robert Savage. The application was made by Savage himself, accompanied by Fogarty, in Lusk Police Station. It appeared that Rooney went to Fogarty and arranged that he should accompany Savage when making the application. When in a car on the way to the police station, Fogarty explained the procedure to Savage.

On arrival at the station, Fogarty told Sergeant McDade that Savage wanted to purchase a lorry. The sergeant explained that there would be some delay. Savage received the permit at the station shortly afterwards. The transaction was duly completed, and the lorry passed into Rooney's hands.

The State case was that Fogarty had given false and misleading information, inasmuch as he told Sergeant McDade that Savage wanted to buy a lorry, when he knew that it was Rooney who was purchasing the vehicle, and that Savage was only the nominal purchaser.

Robert Savage bore out Mr. O'Keeffe's statement with reference to the application for a permit. Some days after he made the application he received the permit in Lusk police station.

Cross-examined by Mr. Noel Hartnett (instructed by Messrs. Kennedy and McGonigal), who, with Mr. Sean McBride, S.C., appears for Fogarty, Savage said that he had no interest in buying the lorry. Peter Rooney had told him that he was going to buy a motor lorry from Harford, and that he wanted to use the name Savage. Rooney had had no business with him before that.

Mr. Hartnett—Did you ever authorise Rooney to use your signature?—No.

Did you get any money from Rooney?—Yes; he gave me £2 for loss of my time.

In a statement he made to the police, read in Court, Savage said that the lorry had never been in his possession. He had never received petrol coupons for it, but had told the postman to deliver them to Rooney.

Sergeant Daniel McDade, Lusk, gave evidence of the visit of Fogarty, Savage and another man to the police station on October 2nd, 1943. On March 9th, 1944, he interviewed Fogarty at his house. He told him that he was investigating irregularities in connection with the sale of a motor lorry to Robert Savage in October, 1943; that the lorry was not in his possession. Fogarty complied with the request of his for a statement.

Sergeant McDade told Mr. McBride that he bore no ill-will against Fogarty, and had not been influenced in any way in his investigations. He denied that he had suggested anything to witnesses when taking their statements in the case.

At the end of his cross-examination the Court rose until this morning.

Electricity Cut Off.—During a heavy thunderstorm which broke over Rosslare Harbour on Wednesday the electric current was cut off for many hours.

CHOIRS' DAY AT FEIS CEOIL

YESTERDAY was choir day at the Feis Ceoil in Dublin, almost 30 choirs taking part. Some of the interest was missing in that only one Belfast choir appeared. Choirs from Portadown and from Whitehead, Co. Antrim, brought the total of Northern choirs to three. There was a big surprise in the contest for the Griffith Challenge Cup for male voices, when the choir of the Teachers' Club, Parnell square, won the trophy, defeating the Alpha Male Voice Choir, of Belfast. The trophy has not been won by a Dublin choir for almost 20 years. In the contest for the Florence Culwick Cup, for mixed choirs, only two choirs competed—one from Dublin and the other from the North. Pride of place went to the Dublin singers, but the standard was disappointing, and the cup was withheld, only a second prize being recommended.

Hamilton Harty Cup (Piano Concerto)—Won by Patricia Herbert, 187 Griffith avenue, Dublin.

Adjudicating, Mr. Harry Isaacs said that the winner possessed all the qualities required to master all the difficulties of the test piece (the Grieg Piano Concerto) and to interpret it as the composer intended. Hers was a magnificent performance.

Recital Programme Award (Instrumental Trio)—Won by Carmel Lang, Maire Larchet and Betty Sullivan, 34 Villiers road, Dublin.

Wallis Cup (Songs to Own Accompaniment)—Won by Nancy Buckley, Charlemont road, Dublin.

Joseph O'Mara Cup (Operatic Singing by Male Voices)—Won by William F. Dunne, Stradbrook, Howth road, Raheny (tenor).

Mr. Dawson Freer, who adjudicated, said that it was an interesting competition in which there were some fine voices, but the standard of performance fell short.

Women's Choirs (Irish)—1, Cór Craobh an Cheitinnigh; 2, Cór Ban, Craobh na gCúig gCúigí. Women's Choirs (English)—1, Sion Hill Ladies' Choral Society; 2, Irish Girl Guides' Choir, 74 St. Stephen's Green. Corn Hardebec (Mixed Voice Choirs in Irish)—1, Cór Chraobh an Cheitinnigh; 2, Cór na h-Ard Chraoibhe. Culwick Cup (Mixed Voice Choirs)—No first prize awarded. Recommended for second prize—New Ireland Assurance Choral Society.

Male Voice Choir — 1, Cor Club na Muinteoiri, Parnell square, Dublin; 2 Alpha Male Choir. Joseph Sarto Cup (Plainsong)—1, St. Laurence O'Toole's C.B.S., Dublin. Primary School Choirs — 1, Cor Sgoil Phadraig, Drumcondra; 2, Oblate School of Mary Immaculate, Dublin; 3, Loreto Convent, St. Stephen's Green, Dublin. Secondary and Technical School Choirs—1, Holy Faith Secondary School, Dominick street, Dublin; 2, Dominican College, Eccles street, Dublin; 3, Holy Faith Convent, Glasnevin.

Arthur Catterall Cup (Violin Concerto)—Won by Fanny Feehan, 42 Haddington road, Dublin; highly commended, Jean Heacock, Carrickmacross.

Mr. Henry Holst, adjudicating, said that the winner was a born musician. He agreed with her interpretation of the music on almost every point, and she had played the concerto as he would have played it himself.

Junior Piano (under 17) — 1, Alice Ingoldsby, 54 Grace Park road, Drumcondra; 2, Joseph Brennan, Beltra, Dalkey, Co. Dublin.

Junior Violin (under 16) — 1, Joan McElroy, Dundalk; 2, Brendan O'Reilly, Clare road, Whitehall.

Viola—1, Shiela O'Loughlin, St. Aidan's, Park avenue, Fairview; 2, Kathleen Costello, Sligo.

Mrs. P. J. Geoghegan Cup (Female Voices: Dramatic Solo and Irish Song)—Won by Ursula O'Riordan, 52 Kenilworth Park, Rathgar; very highly commended, Zuilmah Hopkins, Briarly, Churchtown, Co. Dublin.

Mr. Steuart Wilson, who adjudicated, said that the winner had not only sung well, but had shown herself an accomplished actress.

Bass Solo—No gold or silver medal awarded. Recommended for bronze medal—Will Robinson, Dungannon, and John Whelan, New Ross.

Mr. Steuart Wilson said that the class did not come up to Feis Ceoil standards. The voices were big and rough, with plenty of vigour, but no attempt at polish or art.

Girls' Solo Singing (15 to 18 years)—1, Silver Medal, Angela O'Connor, St Mary's Secondary School, Holy Faith Convent, Glasnevin; 2, Bronze Medal, Ismay Hanan, Wesley College, Dublin.

Adjudicating, Mr. Dawson Freer said that he was struck not only by the performance in this class, but by the promise. Some of the girls were going to develop into very good singers if they took care of their voices now.

Limerick Murder Charge.—At a special Court in Limerick yesterday Mary Harvey (23), Querrin, Kilkee, was charged with the murder of her illegitimate child, Michael, aged 2½ years, whose body was found in a lake near Clondrinagh, Co. Clare, on April 1st.

Important Dates For Sowing

By G. O. SHERRARD.

THERE are certain sowings in which correct timing is of the first importance to the success of the crop, one of such sowings is now due, that of late savoy. This vegetable is needed for consumption in February and March, when the only other greens available in the garden are brussels sprouts and curly kale. Its extreme hardiness makes it indifferent to the weather, but if sown too early it will heart up in November, when York cabbage is still available, and, if the sowing is made too late, it will not form hearts at all. The critical date of sowing for Co. Dublin is on or within a day or two of May 12th; in the South of Ireland a few days after that date, and in the North a few days before it. The choice of variety is as important as the date of sowing, for there are very few savoys which will stand till March. The variety used almost exclusively in Co. Dublin is named Model, and I don't know of a better one.

SPRAY TOMATOES

Tomatoes planted in cold houses should now be making active growth and will need careful attention to ensure good setting. On a sunny day a fine spray over the foliage and flowers will help the latter to set; it should be given in the morning. Tapping the supporting canes or the stems of the plants, if they are trained to string, also assists pollination; in the latter case a padded stick should be used for the tapping. This operation should be carried out during the hottest part of the day. Those amateurs who have the necessary leisure might try artificial pollination. Just when the flower begins to fade the corolla is gently pulled off, taking care not to touch the pistil, which is then fully exposed. Pollen is collected in a watch-glass by tapping some flowers over it when the sun is shining. The point of the pistil—that is the stigma of the prepared flower—is brought in contact with the pollen by holding the watch glass beneath it. With a little practice the operation is quickly performed, but the plants should be gone over every day. This method has been used successfully at the Albert College for the setting of the first truss which often gives trouble. Of course, if the plants get dry nothing will induce them to set, and the blossoms drop off at a joint just above the corolla. Dull, cold weather is also not conducive to good setting.

POTATOES

First early potatoes have suffered heavily during the recent frosts. In spite, however, of the blackened appearance of the stalks they should throw secondary growths from the base, and it would be better to leave them where they are than to attempt to replant; a crop should be gathered from them, albeit a delayed and reduced one.

VARIETY SHOW IN IRISH

Harry O'Donovan appeared on Monday night and Jimmy O'Dea on Wednesday night on the Olympia stage to support "Hot-Seadh," a variety show in Irish. "Marrying Mary," Jimmy O'Dea's favourite sketch, is being played in Irish, and to ensure its success he has lent his famous black wig to Jimmy Kavanagh, who has been hailed as a new and stimulating "dame." "Hot-Seadh" continues to attract big houses.

EARLY MONASTIC DUBLIN

The Irish name for Dublin should be Duibhlinn, and not Baile Atha Cliath, said the Very Rev. Myles Ronan, P.P., D.Litt., in a lecture on early monastic Dublin in the Academy of Christian Art last night. He said that the correct Irish name had been preserved by the Norse and Anglo-Normans for their city of Dublin.

"The only remains of early monastic Dublin," he said, "are the cross-inscribed stones in St. Patrick's Cathedral; in the porch of the present Protestant St. Audoen's Church, and in the National Museum: the 15th-century carved oak statue of the Virgin and Child of St. Mary's Abbey, now preserved in the Carmelite Church, Whitefriar street; the broken glazed tiles of the Chapter House of the Abbey, now forming the floor of the office of Boland's bakery, Capel street, and the Chapter House itself, now in the possession of the Board of Works.

"We are long waiting for the restoration of the Chapter House from its undignified present condition to its former beauty. It is the only building that remains of early monastic Dublin."

FRENCH ACTORS TO VISIT DUBLIN

The Théâtre Molière de Londres, a company of French actors from Paris theatres, will present two plays at the Gate Theatre, Dublin, for three days, beginning on Sunday, May 13th.

For the last four years these players have been playing together in London under the direction of M. Paul Bonifas, of the Comédie Française. They are coming to Ireland at the invitation of Hilton Edwards and Micheál Mac Liammóir (Dublin Gate Theatre Productions, Ltd.), and will produce Molière's "Le Malade Imaginaire" and "Le Gendre de M. Poirier," by Emile Augier and Jules Sandeau.

MORE VISIT THE ZOO

So far this year, 71,629 people had visited the Dublin Zoo—11,864 more than in the corresponding period last year, it was stated at Saturday's Zoo members' breakfast—the first of the summer season. It was also mentioned that, owing to the rapid growth in strength of Charlie, the chimpanzee, it had become necessary to strengthen his cage by fitting new iron bars to the roof. To prevent him from ripping up the boards of his cage—a possible means of escape which he had discovered—it had been decided to build a brick wall under the cage.

Captain Alan Gordon, President of the Society, was in the chair, and about 100 members and friends were present.

£2,860 For Tobacco

At Omagh Mental Hospital last year £2,860 was spent on tobacco, cigarettes and snuff, although expenditure in the previous year was £2,691 when the number of patients was larger and prices were the same. The electricity account for one quarter was over £500. It was decided to obtain details of this expenditure at yesterday's meeting of the Committee.

Dublin Remains Subdued

THERE was little or no improvement in trading on the Dublin Stock Exchange yesterday. When markets opened, all eyes were on British Industrials. Dull conditions were advised from London, and small local selling put prices lower. Irish securities showed little life, but the tone was steady.

Among Home Government Funds, the Second and Third National Loans shed fractions. British Government Funds, generally, made a dull showing. In a small Banking group, Nationals, on quiet buying, improved to 51s. 4½d.

Gt. Northern Rails attracted a fair measure of attention at steady levels. Coras Iompair Common declined to 73½. Goulding Deb. jumped 1s. to 108s. 6d., and Yam Seng Rubbers improved to 2s. Guinness Ord. held 147s., but Power Deb. hardened to 23s. 7½d.

SENTENCES IN DUBLIN

Sentences of nine months' imprisonment, to date from January 31st, were imposed by Judge Shannon, in the Circuit Criminal Court, Dublin, yesterday, on Thomas Nichol (20), no fixed address, and George Green (19), Bride Road Flats, who had pleaded guilty to charges of housebreaking and the larceny of property value £121.

A suspensory sentence of six months' imprisonment was imposed on George Walsh (35), street trader, Bride street, who pleaded guilty to receiving some of the property.

Miss Mary Catherine Garde-Browne, late of 29 Upper Leeson street, Dublin, £85,767 13s. 6d. (gross Great Britain and Eire).

Cape Buying Lifts Kaffirs And Rubbers

FROM OUR LONDON FINANCIAL CORRESPONDENT

STEADIER Gilt-edged, dull Industrials and buoyant Kaffirs and Rubbers were features on the London Stock Exchange yesterday. The presence of discriminating buyers of Gilt-edged gave a steadier appearance to this market, but Colonial issues were still dull, with wider prices quoted. Foreign features included further strength of Chileans on plans for increased redemption, with Mexicans again wanted. Germans were flat, Dawes being down one at 14½, but Japanese were favoured.

Quite sharp falls developed in British Rails on post-war uncertainties, with Southern Preferred a point down at 74 and "Berwick" Second Preference, at 27¼, down ⅞.

Talk of an imminent general election was still said to be the main factor in dullness of the Industrial section, which finished at the day's lowest.

Orders on Cape account caused good rises in the Kaffir section. Dealers look for further progress to-day if the higher London prices do not attract Cape sales. Eastern Rubber and Tin shares were still inquired for on the improved war situation.

"SLUBBERS" DIVIDEND RAISED

Dyeing forms an important part in the textile industries, and for many years past British Cotton and Wool Dyers Association, Ltd., has occupied a leading position in this section. It was formed in 1900, when over 50 companies engaged in the dyeing trade united in the Association.

The fortunes of the company have varied with those of the textile industries. It has had bad times, as, for instance, in 1913, when the capital was reconstructed and reduced by cancelling 5s. per £1 share. To-day, the capital is £774,165 in 5s. stock units. In the past ten years, dividends have ranged between 3¾ and 6¼ p.c., peak profits having been earned in the year to March 31st, 1940. They fell away in 1941, and for four years only 5 p.c. was paid.

The last four years have seen a steady recovery, and now it is announced that, for the year to March 31st last, the dividend is to be restored to the 6¼ p.c. level. The capital is all in Ordinary stock. There is, however, £620,000 of 4 p.c. Debenture stock in issue. The 5s. stock units have been dealt in at 7s. 6d.

BRITISH BORNEO "PETS"

The 6/- Ordinary shares of the British Borneo Petroleum Syndicate, Ltd., now quoted at about 18/6, provide an interesting means of taking an interest in the oil industry. It is true that since the occupation of Brunei by the Japanese the company's income has suffered from the cessation of the royalty payments it was receiving, but this loss has been more than counterbalanced by income from other investments, with the result that it has succeeded in maintaining its dividend at 10 p.c.

Among these other investments is a large holding in Apex (Trinidad) Oilfields, Ltd., which last year paid dividends amounting to 30 p.c., while it also has a moderate holding in the Ultramar Co., the shares of which have risen so substantially. Net profits in the year to March 31st last are now stated at £28,973, against £29,585 in the previous year, and the dividend is repeated at 10 p.c. In the pre-war years the company was adding bonuses ranging from 2½ to 7½ p.c. to its 10 p.c. dividends.

In their certificate to the last balance sheet the auditors stated that the book value of the oil interests and investments was made up mainly of quoted securities and shares, the market value of which was substantially in excess of the amount at which they were included in the balance sheet.

Ever Ready Profits

A further improvement in results is shown by Ever Ready (Ireland) Ltd., in the report for the year ended March 31st, 1944.

Trading profit was £16,589, against £15,621. Directors' fees again take £300, and £962 (against £982) is written off plant, machinery, etc., leaving a balance of £15,327, against £14,389 for the previous year. Transfer to reserve is £9,395, against £8,163.

The dividend on the Ordinary shares is unchanged at 10 p.c., and the carry-forward is £1,139, against £1,407.

In their report, the directors state that, not merely did their production not drop during the war, but that, in some years, it was increased by 50 p.c. The end of the war will not lessen raw material difficulties; but, in time, matters should, they state, improve.

Stewarts and Lloyds' Good Results

Excellent results are recorded in the full 1944 report of Stewarts and Lloyds, published yesterday. They should help to increase confidence in the outlook of heavy industry. Profits are up from £1,599,075 to £1,989,836, and, excluding the special obsolescence reserve transfer of £500,000, the maintained dividend of 12½ p.c. is covered by earnings of 25.7 p.c.

The balance sheet shows the financial position to be one of great strength. Current assets exceed current liabilities by £3,099,000, while free reserves and carry forward amount to £2,542,000. Further to this, as much as £6,575,000 has been written off fixed assets having a book value of £14,841,000, and there is an export trade reserve of £500,000. The Chairman promises the submission of a consolidated balance sheet and profit and loss account for the year ending December 31st next.

When this fuller information comes forward there can be no doubt but that the financial position of Stewarts and Lloyds group will appear in even more favourable light than the accounts suggest in their present holding company form. Interests in subsidiaries at December 31st last accounted for £4,983,000 from a balance sheet total of £28,900,000. At 55s. 9d., the £1 Deferred stock units of the company yield 4.5 p.c.

WALL STREET

NEW YORK, Thursday.—The Stock Exchange opened on a heavy note. In fairly active trading, the retreat was extended during the morning by fractions to more than one point, with dealings picking up as offering became more insistent. Activity slowed down towards mid-day, however. A few Aircraft and peace-rated stocks advanced slightly in the afternoon, but the majority of issues lacked vigour.

Recessions ranging to two points were widespread, and the market closed easy. The turnover of 1,510,000 shares comprised 971 issues, of which 23 advanced and 695 declined.—(Reuter.)

CENSORSHIP

"The freedom of the Press is a very important thing to preserve in these days"—Mr. Justice Gavan Duffy.

Obiter dicta from the Bench have become a regular feature of judicial procedure in these islands; but it is seldom that a High Court Judge delivers himself of such a vital statement as that which was made by Mr. Justice Gavan Duffy during the hearing of a case in Dublin last Monday. The freedom of the Press is an integral part of the democratic system of government. It was achieved in Great Britain only after years of bitter and determined struggle. In all the English-speaking countries, particularly in England and the United States, it is regarded now as a national birthright; and we are proud to say that, after the change of Government in Ireland twenty-three years ago, this priceless heritage of liberty was preserved. No nation can enjoy true freedom without an untrammelled Press. It is a significant fact that, in almost every case of incipient dictatorship, almost the first step to be taken by those who have coveted power has been the establishment of a rigid control over the newspapers. The most notable example, probably, has been that of Germany, where, after the seizure of authority by the National Socialist Party, the whole Press was ruthlessly gleichgeschaltet. This innovation was all the more remarkable since, even at the height of the last war, the German newspapers, such as Vorwärts and Die Zukunft, whose editor was that brilliant journalist, Maximilian Harden, were allowed a truly surprising freedom of expression, while the great Liberal journals, such, for example, as the Berliner Tageblatt and the Frankfurter Zeitung, enjoyed a latitude comparable to that which was enjoyed, and still is enjoyed, by newspapers such as the Manchester Guardian in England. In Italy, even for some time after the advent of the Fascist Government in 1922, the Corriere della Sera, of Milan, under Albertini, exercised a profound influence on Italian thought until Signor Mussolini decided to get rid of its editor. It may not be too much to say that the tragic fate that has befallen both Germany and Italy in this war has been due, in decisive measure, to the fact that the newspaper Press has been muzzled. The very essence of democracy is that parties, groups and individuals shall be permitted to express their views without let or hindrance. So soon as a Government decides to curb or restrain that freedom of public expression, democratic ideals must begin to wilt. Naturally, in time of war or national emergency, normal conditions no longer can be expected. Salus reipublicæ suprema lex. No intelligent or reasonable democrat can complain if, when the very life of his nation is on the hazard, the Government, which has been elected democratically, imposes certain restrictions upon the newspapers. Journalists themselves would be the last to grumble in circumstances of national peril; but, in our view, it is essential that censorship shall be confined to periods of genuine danger.

Speaking in the Senate on Tuesday, Mr. Gerald Boland, Minister for Justice, announced that the censorship in this country "would disappear soon." We hope sincerely that this statement reflects the views of Mr. de Valera and his Cabinet. Mr. Boland is not responsible for the censorship, which comes under the control of the Minister for the Co-Ordination of Defensive Measures, whose views on the subject of its continuance are as yet unknown. May we appeal to Mr. Aiken to make an end of the censorship with the least possible delay? The war, so far as it affects, or is likely to affect, our little country, is over. There no longer are diplomatic relations between Ireland and Germany, for the good and sufficient reason that the structure of the Third Reich has been destroyed, and the German Minister in Dublin, whose demeanour throughout the war has been dignified as well as diplomatically correct, has informed Mr. de Valera that he considers his mission to have come to an end. Under Providence, Ireland has been kept out of war's fatal whirlpool; and our little land now can look forward to an unbroken period of peace. We believe that at heart, the Taoiseach is a democrat. Nevertheless, the mere fact that he towers above all his party colleagues in personality, as well as in political ability, has made him at times impatient and intolerant of that criticism which must be expected and accepted by every democratic leader. We confess that we are slightly concerned regarding his attitude towards the Press. In the first month of 1938, nearly two years before the war began, Mr. de Valera was the guest of honour at the annual dinner of the Dublin and Irish Association District of the Institute of Journalists; and on that occasion he spoke at some length on the freedom of the Press. "I stand for the liberty of the Press in its proper and original sense," he said. "The Press did not get its liberty from a statute. It got its liberty . . . . from the long struggle against abuse of power by the public authority; and there is nobody who would stand more strongly behind the Press in its demand for freedom from that interference than I. On the other hand, I hold that the vague idea that is abroad about the freedom of the Press is harmful; and, in their own interests, and in the public interest, journalists should not do anything to foster it." Earlier in his speech, Mr. de Valera had criticised the idea that newspapers ought to be entirely free to say what they liked. Our answer is that even in the most ideal circumstances they never can be entirely free. They are subject, and rightly subject, to the ordinary laws of the land, under which they are estopped from offences against the moral as well as the civil law. We agree with Mr. de Valera that liberty ought not to be allowed to degenerate into licence, but we hold strongly that the newspapers of this country have a tradition of decent citizenship which can compare favourably with that of the newspapers of any other civilised country. For that reason, we would urge the Government to restore to them that measure of freedom which is not only their privilege but also their right. The censorship has been in existence now for more than five and a half years. It is high time that it should be no more.

Those Shelters

From the physical point of view, the war has left few traces upon Dublin city. The ruins which are characteristic of Belfast, and of virtually every large town across the Channel, are mercifully absent from our own capital. Indeed, the visitor would perceive only one indication that for several years this city was on the edge of crisis. He would have his eyes offended—and, if he were a motorist or cyclist, his progress impeded—by some hundreds of air-raid shelters, which sprang up, as it were, overnight during the terrible winter of 1940. Now that the European war is over, can we venture to hope that these excrescences will be removed as rapidly as they came? They are, unfortunately, an "unproductive asset": nothing can be done with them; they cannot even be sold for scrap. Nevertheless, they are only a nuisance where they are—a danger to traffic, and a blemish. It is highly improbable that they ever will see service. Even if, by some miracle, hostilities should flare out again, and this country once more should be faced with crisis, they would be next to useless; for all the experience of the last two or three years of war has shown that surface shelters offer no real protection against the colossal bombs which are employed nowadays—bombs in comparison with which the "land mine" that wrecked the North Strand was but a baby. We would urge the Government and Corporation to symbolise the return of peace by the instant removal of these shelters, and to let Dublin's citizens see their city as they saw it so many years ago.

A MATTER of more than usual interest was discussed in your Dáil towards the end of last month. I must ask you to read the following, which is an extract from the Official Report of a speech made by Mr. James Dillon:

"Mr. Dillon . . . . I recently met a grown man who was a candidate at the final examination of the Incorporated Law Society for solicitors' apprentices in Irish. One of the prescribed books published by the Gúm rejoiced in the name of An Múil. This is a collection of short stories the principal of which deals with a female mule. This is the case of a man of 21 years of age who had to apply his mind to the following story which is a publication from the Gúm. A gentleman purchases a female mule, and on his return from the fair where he had made the purchase he came upon two bands of fairies playing camogie. There was then set out at length the name of each female fairy on each of the camogie teams. The camogie game was described at great length with the female mule making observations during its progress. At the conclusion of the game the names of all the female fairies playing the camogie were again reproduced. The observations made in the course of the journey from the scene of the encounter back to the home of the gentleman with the female mule were described in some detail. Outside of bedlam was there ever such fantastic nonsense? Can you conceive the feelings of a man trying to prepare himself for a final examination under the Incorporated Law Society when he is required to burn the midnight oil to read about a mule? . . . I recognise that picture books and children's books must be published, but there ought to be some standard of excellence, some limit to the extent to which pages can be covered with print in setting out at length the Christian and surnames of every female fairy in two teams of camogie players. I know that Deputies will find it hard to believe that, but I assure them that it is true. . . . What advantage is going to accrue to anybody from reading the names of 15 female fairies engaged in playing camogie? This is the kind of thing that makes one despair so far as the revival of Irish is concerned.

"Mr. O'Donnell: A camogie team consists of 12 players. . . ."

I find myself more or less in agreement with the Deputy on the general aesthetic issue but I do not find that the work described is out of harmony with the present trend of Gaelic letters. In fairness, however, it must be said that while mules in general are notoriously without extended genealogy, the beast in question here (probably a jennet in reality) could claim kinship with 'The Golden Ass.'

There are other questions, e.g., could fairies have Christian names, surnames? It may be that no advantage accrues to anybody from reading about this elfin camogie match but if it comes to that—what advantage accrues from perusing, in your diverting Anglo-Irish literature, chronicles concerned with the dread 'love' appetite of peasants? The stowing of landed relatives in old wells? The fracture by crowbar of old age pensioners' crania? Indeed, is it 'advantageous' to read the very newspapers?

And this 'grown' man who is attempting an examination conducted by the Incorporated Law Society? What possible ground can there be for thinking that camogie and female leprahauns are intrinsically alien to this juvenile's intellectual climate?

Frankly, what I don't like about the whole thing is the fact, nakedly expressed, that Mr. Dillon does not believe in fairies. Alas for poor A.E.!

PURE FOOD

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—The Irish Housewives congratulate the Irish Retail Traders' Protection Association on their "pure food" scheme which they have submitted to Dr. Ward.

We are entirely in favour of some form of control of the manufacture of food stuffs. Not only should the manufacturesr submit his product for analysis, and the contents be printed on containers, but no person should manufacture any article of food until his premises and method of manufacture have been passed as suitable, and he has been granted a licence as a fit person to manufacture food.

We think that the public should be safeguarded from possible infection by persons engaged in manufacturing or handling food being submitted to medical examination. This, of course, would apply to shopkeepers as well as manufacturers.

The question of licences for retailers has been discussed by the trade, presumably to limit the number of small shops. We should like a high standard of cleanliness to be the basis on which licences are granted. We again stress the need for more inspectors, and more women inspectors.—Yours, etc.,

A. D. SKEFFINGTON,
M. H. TWEEDY.

BRITISH THANKSGIVING SERVICE

Britain's National Service of Thanksgiving will be held in St. Paul's Cathedral, London, on Sunday. King George, Queen Elizabeth, Princess Elizabeth, Princess Margaret, Queen Mary, the King of Norway, the King of the Hellenes and King Peter of Yugo-Slavia will be present.

Northern Holiday Over.—Yesterday the people of Northern Ireland returned to work after the victory celebration. Generally speaking, there was a good attendance at the large industrial establishments. In Belfast, not a single case of broken shop windows was reported, although shopkeepers had shown some anxiety beforehand, and some of them had had their windows boarded up.

DEATH

BRODERICK—May 10, 1945, at his residence, 17 Trimleston avenue, Booterstown, Dublin, Richard Joseph Broderick, aged 75 years. Deeply mourned by his wife and family. R.I.P. Remains arrive at Church of the Assumption, Booterstown, at 6 p.m. to-day (Friday). Funeral, after 9.30 Mass, to-morrow (Saturday) to Glasnevin.

AN IRISHMAN'S DIARY

Trophy Hunting

I LEARN that there is a carnival at Whitehall, on the northern edges of the city of Dublin. I find that this carnival is running a miniature golf course, with a dozen new golf balls to be won for skill. I discover that the annual Press and Advertising Convention takes place this week-end at Bundoran. It is revealed to me that for this occasion I need a golf-ball, in addition to the constitution of a horse. So I go to the carnival at Whitehall, to win some golf-balls by skill.

I picked a good day. Yesterday, at the Whitehall Carnival, was Children's Day. The children were allowed in free. The children came in millions. Griffith avenue was alive with them. They came pouring down the Belfast road, and up the Belfast road, and every one of them had his or her mouth open, screaming wildly. Like a river, they poured into the Whitehall Carnival, breaking over me, and the ices stall, and Madame Estelle, the palmist. They flung themselves upon the merry-go-round, and the Palace of Varieties, the Ghost Train and the Whip, clinging to the railings of these entertainments, screaming. The carnival was carpeted with a moving, running, screaming mass of children.

I received a compass bearing from the stewards' hut, and started out for the miniature golf-course.

Trapped

I found myself fenced by two endless, writhing lines of children. One line was queuing up for the Ghost Train; the other for the Dodgem Cars. There was no way out. I pushed through the Ghost Train queue. At once, I became imprisoned by the children waiting to get at Mervani, the magician. Several children were crying loudly, after the treatment that had been applied to the Ghost Train impediment. I walked back down the Mervani line. It ended in a formless mass of children waiting to get into the tea-tent. It was becoming a nightmare.

Hours later I reached the end of the carnival enclosure, and the entrance to the miniature golf.

Over the hedge on the left was a football field. There was no sign of the miniature bunkers, and miniature greens, and miniature flags that one might expect to see upon a miniature golf-course. And the door leading to the miniature golf-course was shut.

I climbed over a wall, and crawled through a barbed wire fence. At one end of the football field was a tent, and a small heap of sand. Very discreetly, I raised the flap of the tent. It was empty, save for a table and a chair, and a lot of torn tickets lying about on the trampled grass.

Solitude

Beside the heap of sand there were three divot marks in the rough grass. I followed the direction of the divot marks, and without warning, came to the first green. The first green was perhaps fifteen yards from the first tee—a slightly flattened piece of football ground, with a hole in the middle of it. Similar greens were spread around the level football field. There were no flags, and no tee-boxes, and no caddies, and nobody looking after the miniature golf-course. It probably did not open until the evening.

It occurred to me that I was probably further from getting a new golf ball than I had ever been in my life, standing here on an empty football ground in Whitehall, with fifty children being flashed round in Dodgem Cars, watched by forty thousand more, in an enclosure on the other side of the hedge.

It was probably the worst shot ever made at getting a new golf ball, in the whole history of the golf-ball shortage.

Local Addition

When the actors and actresses of the Théâtre Molière arrive in Dublin to-morrow morning they are going to be short of a juvenile. The lack of a juvenile is due to British restrictions upon the employment of child actors.

So Dublin will supply its own juvenile, in the person of Miss Colette Sigal. Miss Sigal is thirteen years of age. She is a Belgian, who was born in Brussels. Her grandmother was French.

Miss Sigal has been attending Alexandra College for the last few years; and last year won a scholarship in pianoforte at the same institution She has had at least one previous appearance upon the stage, having performed in opera last season with Miss Eveline Burchill's school of ballet.

She will appear in "Le Malade Imaginaire," next Sunday and Monday, in the part of Louison—fille cadette D'Argan, et sœur d'Angélique.

(I'm not the only one to be taking a rapid flash through Hugo, in preparation for the festival).

QUIDNUNC.

THE T.C.D. EPISODE

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—I think it only right that your readers should know that a large number—possibly a large majority—of Trinity students deplore the demonstrations on the roof last Monday. One thing that 95%, at least, of College is ashamed of is the attempted burning of the Irish flag. An equally large majority regret the position of the Irish flag on the flagstaff under the British, Russian and French flags.

Before judging College too harshly, people should consider the circumstances under which the events occurred. It is an undoubted fact (so well-known that the Censor surely will not object to its appearing in print) that Trinity throughout the war years was almost unanimous in its support of the United Nations. Great numbers of graduates were fighting in the British forces, and all during the war there was a steady stream of recruits. Many of us in College longed to join this stream, but were restrained by parental advice that we would be more use to the world as qualified doctors and engineers. All of us realise that by the demonstrations on Monday we have laid ourselves open to the charges "What have you done that entitles you to celebrate?" and "if you are so patriotic why did you not go out and fight?"

Well, as I have said, many of us wanted to, but were told that we would be more useful later as qualified doctors and engineers. This answer does not cover arts students. They are composed of two groups, one large and one small. The small group had not sufficient faith in the aims of the United Nations to make them feel any urge to fight for them. The larger group had, but considered themselves citizens of a neutral country and, therefore, that they had no duty to go.

When the news of peace came on Monday College was overjoyed. The aims we believed in had been achieved; the systems we disliked had been vanquished. Our friends and relations in the United Nations' forces were safe; in some cases the danger of instant destruction had been removed from our homes and parents.

These feelings of relief and triumph went to our heads and resulted in the demonstrations on the roof. No one, however, even at that time, would have in the slightest degree approved, or, if we had known about it, allowed, the burning of the Irish flag. The facts are that this was done by two people—neither of them citizens of Eire—and was seen only by a very small group. It happened at the time of the first rush of the crowd through the gates, when everyone's attention was on them, and not on the two gentlemen with the flag. The reaction throughout College to this incident is a unanimous feeling of disgust.

The position of the Irish flag, under the others, was due to momentary hot-headedness, and is also regretted by College. It was in the process of being re-hoisted above the others when a College official said that one flag only could be hoisted on the staff. The U.S.A. flag was then put up as the one least likely to cause ill-feeling, and at the same time to express our sentiments.

I think I am right in saying that the feeling in Trinity now is that it would have been better if the whole incident had not occurred. We certainly did not foresee the result; that our demonstration of gladness at the victory of the Allies would have led to the degradation of the Irish flag, and consequent accusations and attacks from all sides.

We do believe, however, that the various organisations which have caused trouble outside T.C.D. for the last few days are pleased that the incident occurred. First, because it fitted in with their ideas, founded on ignorance, of the outlook of this University; and secondly because if they have not a supposed scandal to broadcast their existence would be without purpose.—Yours, etc.,

MRS. TRUMAN'S IRISH RELATIVES

Since it was mentioned in the Irish Times that Mrs. Elizabeth Truman, wife of the President of the U.S.A., is the daughter of Mr. Robert Wallace, who emigrated from Couragurnee, Roscrea, messages of congratulation have been received at Roscrea by the Wallace family, including Mrs. R. O. Dart, a cousin, who resides at Inane House. Mrs. Truman's father has corresponded regularly with his nephews, Messrs. Robert and Charles Wallace. She has two other cousins—Mrs. J. Talbot and Mrs. H. Talbot—living in Malahide, Co. Dublin.

Unemployment Figures.—The number registered at the Employment Exchanges on May 5th was 62,454, 1,202 less than in the previous week. The number registered at the corresponding period last year was 63,032.

THE DANGER IS NOT PAST

"This may be the last year of exceptional difficulty, but, whether it is or not, we must make sure of our essential supplies for this year by our own production. Fuel is an essential. Without it industry will cease, and appalling hardship will visit every home. Now is the time to avert that possibility of disaster. Every turf bog must, in these coming months, be a scene of intense activity that will bear testimony to our capacity to 'stick it out,' to our ability to maintain organised and co-operative effort so long as the national need requires it, to our determination that no calamity will befall our people which hard work can avert."

—Mr. Sean Lemass, Minister for Supplies, in Broadcast address on 21st March, 1945.

Lack of Vitamins A & D

Stunted Growth

Your Child Needs Sound Teeth and Healthy Bones

Cod Liver Oil is the one supreme tonic for thin, anaemic or backward children, because it contains the essential vitamins A and D. It is the sure builder of straight bones and muscles, and promotes the growth of strong teeth, so necessary for general health and vitality.

No more crying and fretting nowadays, because all chemists sell JESSELS COD LIVER OIL EXTRACT TABLETS—tasting like a sweet.

Sugar-coated, they are chockfull of the vital Vitamins A and D, plus reduced iron, calcium and other valuable tonic ingredients. Get a box to-day. You will be surprised how quickly your child will begin to eat well and gain health and strength. They are especially recommended as a preventative of colds, and for fighting the ever-increasing menace of rickets, now so prevalent. Remember, Jessels for Muscles.
